"Breathing" is a single by Kate Bush, the first cut from her 1980 album Never for Ever, with backing vocals by Roy Harper. The single was issued on 14 April 1980, four months before the album was released, and reached number 16 in the UK charts, remaining in the charts for seven weeks. It was the first single by Bush to feature a non-LP track on its B-side, "The Empty Bullring".

"Wow" is a song by English singer Kate Bush. Originally released on her second album Lionheart in 1978, it was issued as the album's second single in March 1979. It was a top 20 hit in the UK. "'Wow' is about the music business," she told her KBC fan club magazine in 1979. "Not just rock music but show business in general. It was sparked off when I sat down to try to write a Pink Floyd song ...

This song is based on Kate Smith addressing a group of African-American children, specifically orphans. It was featured in the 1933 film Hello, Everybody!, in which Smith starred. During the track, she is basically encouraging these orphans to fantasize about what she perceives as an ideal – albeit racist – afterlife for them which she refers to as “Pickaninny Heaven”.
