The 1940s were glamorous, but turbulent, years in Hollywood. While World War II raged, the aggressors barred American films from vast swaths of the European and Asian markets. How could film studios make up for this loss of revenue? The moguls looked southward for an answer and began cultivating the neglected Latin American market in hopes of making up some of their box office losses.

mikrokosmos:. Liszt - Funérailles. The most famous piece from his suite Harmonies poétiques et religieuses, this work is an almost impressionistic tombeau for Liszt's friends who had died in the Hungarian Uprising of 1848. However, many accidentally assume it is an elegy for Chopin who passed away in 1849, because a the "military march" segment around halfway through has a left hand ...
